Statistically speaking,

- 97 percent of college-aged iGeners own computers.
- 94 percent own cell phones, and 56 percent own mp3 players.
- 76 percent of iGeners use instant messaging for upwards of eighty minutes every day, and 92 percent of those same users report doing other tasks on their computers while engaged in conversations with peers.
- 59 percent of school-aged iGeners are already sharing their artwork, creating videos, designing Web pages, maintaining blogs, and remixing content created by others online.
- 55 percent have created profile pages on social networking sites like Facebook or MySpace, and 47 percent have posted images on photo-sharing sites where others could comment on them. (Junco & Mastrodicasa, 2007; Lenhart, Madden, Smith, & Macgill, 2007)

It's more about texts than real language - we need to make them go from texting into real texts

People in the UK are now texting more than talking, while the average Briton spends 90 minutes per week using social media sites such as Facebook.

The media regulator's latest report indicates that newer ways of communicating, such as texting and social networking, are being led by 16- to 24-year-olds in the UK.

<http://www.digitalspy.co.uk/tech/news/a393881/britons-now-text-more-than-make-calls-finds-ofcom.html>

It's dying out though, isn't it? Beyond the classroom, we just don't XXXXX with XXXXX or XXXXX any more, do we? We text, we tweet, we blog. We even type. We don't write though. Before I started teaching I don't recall picking up a XXXXX in any meaningful way.

A new study says that college students who are on Facebook while studying or doing homework wind up getting 20 percent lower grades than students who don't have the social networking site..

'[Language] is being eroded — it's changing. Our expressiveness and our ease with some words is being diluted so that the sentence with more than one clause is a problem for us, and the word of more than two syllables is a problem for us.

Some 73% of people believe texts and website Twitter have dramatically changed the use of English, with long words falling out of use.

“It's natural with people trying to fit as much information into 140 characters that words are getting shortened and are even becoming redundant as a result.”

Traditional English words such as ‘balderdash’ and ‘cripes’ are dying out thanks to the texting generation, linguists have claimed.

Some 73% of people believe texts and website Twitter have dramatically changed the use of English, with long words falling out of use.

The trends were revealed in a poll of 2,000 adults for the launch of JP Davidson’s book Planet Word.

The book is a tie-in to Stephen Fry’s BBC2 series of the same name, charting the history of language from early grunts to tweets.

The author said: “Language is always evolving and great descriptive words are being lost – but others emerge.

“It’s natural with people trying to fit as much information into 140 characters that words are getting shortened and are even becoming redundant as a result.”

- Research finds people are adapting ability to remember because of power of search engines to remember for them
- In short, people no longer always need to know stuff; they just need to know where it can be found
- Sparrow concludes that the internet has become "an external memory source that we can access at any time" – an arena where information is stored collectively outside ourselves

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/science/2011/jul/15/poor-memory-blame-google>

The survey found that neuroplasticity is, indeed, a thing; that multitasking is, indeed, the new norm; that hyperconnectivity may be leading to a lack of patience and concentration; and that an "always on" ethos may be encouraging a culture of expectation and instant gratification.

Mark Cavendish claims Tour de France stage five victory in Marseille

- Briton holds off Team Sky's Edvald Boasson Hagen
- Stage Five victory is Cavendish's first at this year's Tour

The hands were raised and then whirled like lassos as if Mark Cavendish were banishing the illness and ill-fortune that has clung tightly to him at this year's Tour de France. And then came a smile, as wide as the gap to those he had left behind.

After a week when a bronchial infection has sapped Cavendish's strength, and a crash on the first stage bruised both his chances of a first yellow jersey and bloodied some of his team-mates, this 24th Tour stage victory came as a sweet remedy.

Facts about Volcanoes for Kids

mandybarrow.com

What is a Volcano?

A volcano is a landform (usually a mountain) where molten rock erupts through the surface of the planet.

In simple terms a volcano is a mountain that opens downward to a pool of molten rock (magma) below the surface of the earth. It is a hole in the Earth from which molten rock and gas erupt.

Did you know?

The name "volcano" has its origin from the name of Vulcan, a god of fire in Roman mythology.

As pressure in the molten rock builds up it needs to escape somewhere. So it forces its way up "fissures" which are narrow cracks in the earth's crust. Once the magma erupts through the earth's surface it's called lava.

What is the difference between lava and Magma?

Magma is liquid rock inside a volcano.

Lava is liquid rock (magma) that flows out of a volcano. Fresh lava ranges from 1,300° to 2,200° F (700° to 1,200° C) in temperature and glows red hot to white hot as it flows.

How many volcanoes are there in the world?

There are around 1510 'active' volcanoes in the world. We currently know of 80 or more which are under the oceans.

What are the three layers the Earth is made of?

- Crust
The crust is the outer layer of Earth. It is about 18 miles thick. It is the part we live on.
- Mantle
The second layer is called the mantle. It is about 1,800 miles thick.
- Core
The inner layer is called the core.

What causes volcanoes to erupt?

The Earth's crust is made up of huge slabs called plates, which fit together like a jigsaw puzzle. These plates sometimes move.

Between the Earth's crust and the mantle is a substance called magma which is made of rock and gases.

When two plates collide, one section slides on top of the other, the one beneath is pushed down. Magma is squeezed up between two plates.

Did you know?

Volcanoes are like giant safety valves that release the pressure that builds up inside the Earth.

When magma erupts, what is it called?

When magma erupts through the earth's surface it is called lava

What is the Ring of Fire?

Over half of the world's volcanoes arise in a belt around the Pacific Ocean called the Ring of Fire.
